A Thrilling Rescue.

How Bert R. Lean, of Cheney, Wash., was saved from a frightful death is a story to thrill the world. "A hard cold," he writes, "brought on a desperate lung trouble that baffled an expert doctor here. Then I paid $10 to $15 a visit to a lung specialist in Spokane, who did not help me. Then I went to California but without benefit. At last I used Dr. King's New Discovery which completely cured me and now I am as well as ever." For lung trouble, bronchitis, coughs and colds, asthma, croup and whooping cough it's the supreme 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

No matter what you happen to believe your deeds are going to attract a great deal more attention than your creeds.

If You Are Worth $50,000 Don't Read This

This will not interest you if you are worth fifty thousand dollars, but if you are a man of moderate means and cannot afford to employ a physician when you have an attack of diarrhoea, you will be pleased to know that one or two doses of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy will cure it. This remedy has been in use for many years and is thoroughly reliable. Price 25 cents. For sale by all dealers.

Before His Honor

Why the Prisoner Was Discharged

The case of Basil Lapidus was the last on the docket. Magistrate Alexander Quade, already late for dinner, was about to postpone the hearing when his clerk whispered that the charge was wife-beating and disturbance. This intelligence made the judge settle back in his seat again. His honor took special delight in such cases; never in the whole history of his judicial career was a prisoner known to escape with less than the extreme penalty.

The present culprit was suffering from a cold. The judge was in a like predicament, and whenever the man in the dock cleared his throat, the judge's bronchial tubes began to tickle. This caused him to treasure up animosity against Lapidus before the hearing began.

The fact, too, that the judge's dinner was waiting made the clerk, who knew the judicial temperament, decide that the reprimand which always followed the imposition of the extreme penalty would be well worth hearing in this case.

Judge Quade's court was conducted on most informal lines. When the charge had been read and the plea entered, the magistrate called out:

"Mrs. Julia Lapidus, stand up and be sworn. You, too, Lapidus, get up and swear. Administer the oath, Mr. Clerk, and let's get the thing over. Now, Mrs. Lapidus, don't be afraid."

"O, judge," sighed the prosecuting witness, "I'm so frustrated. This is the first time I've ever been in court."

"You should have come here long ago. Does he abuse you much?"

"No, indeed; this is the first time he ever had a chance."

"Hum-m; sit down a minute. Well, Lapidus, what have you to say? Do you want to change your plea to 'guilty' and save time?"

"He won't do it, your honor," exclaimed his wife. "He never would for me about the simplest things, even when I'd catch him in the act."

"Come, come," growled the magistrate, "make your confession."

The prisoner cleared his throat and began: "Last night I came home with my head tied up—been having a cold for two weeks—regular grip—ringing in the ears—pain in the head and neck—eyes running—also nose—tickling sensation—He stopped to cough."

"Here, here," rubbing his eyes and nose, and coughing in unison with the prisoner, "I don't care about the symptoms. Go ahead."

"When I got home with my head all tied up she came out in the kitchen and said she had a caller in the parlor. I asked who he was, and instead of telling me, she went on about there being a monkey odor in the house. There's a young preacher at our church, and he's very high-church and monkey and I thought at first that he was making a call, and that it was the odor of sanctity she was talking about."

The wagging jaws of Mrs. Lapidus grew articulate at this point and she sprang up.

"I didn't," she asserted. "I said I had supper in the parlor because there was a musty odor in the rest of the house."

"I don't care what led up to the disturbance," cried the magistrate, black-browed with wrath. "Tell me the specific act of ill-usage, and let me get this fellow sentenced and go home to dinner."

"O, I can do that all right," exclaimed the woman. "I'll never forget it as long as I live. Why, after he choked me into swallowing that dose I was so sure I'd die the next minute that I wrote to my sister to come see that my bones were laid to rest in some reputable charnel house."

The judge leaned over to his clerk and whispered:

"Perhaps I can hold this fellow for attempted murder. Just get a commitment blank ready and make the charge attempt to poison. Now, madam, go on."

"Ever since Basil's been sick, I've been depending on the neighbors for good, old-fashioned medicines to give him. Last night I had a pint of real good remedy I'd got from a woman who uses it for all her children, whether they're six feet or only a span long, and—"

Judge Quade held up his hand for silence. A strange emotion held him in thrall.

"Never mind that commitment," he said to his clerk. "Now, Lapidus, my man, you finish the story."

"There's not much to tell. For two weeks the neighbors have been dosing me with every known kind of root, herb, bark and berry, boiled, fried and roasted; and when she had another brand ready for me last night I just took hold and made her swallow it herself. And my cold's been better ever since."

As one in a dream the judge took his overhauls from beneath his desk and put them on. "Court's adjourned," he said. "O, excuse me, Mr. Lapidus, I forgot you're discharged."

And before the clerk could recover from his surprise the judge had departed.

Still in a maze, the magistrate ascended the steps of his home. His wife met him at the door.

"I'm so glad you've come," she cried. "I've just got in from the neighbor's across the street with another kind of cold remedy, and you must drink every drop of it before you sit down to dinner."

For a moment the judge's fingers twitched convulsively. Then he murmured:

"All right, Mary dear."

Women Who Are Envied.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation or kidney troubles show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such, Electric Bitters wonder. They regulate stomach, liver and kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to them. 50c at all druggists.

There are louder noises, but none are quite so satisfactory as the tinkle of a few gold pieces in one's pocket.

Of Interest to Farmers and Mechanics

Farmers and mechanics frequently meet with slight accidents and injuries which cause them much annoyance and loss of time. A cut or bruise may be cured in about one-third the time usually required by applying Chamberlain's Liniment as soon as the injury is received. This liniment is also valuable for sprains, soreness of the muscles and rheumatic pains. There is no danger of blood poisoning from an injury when Chamberlain's Liniment is applied before the parts become inflamed and swollen. For sale by all dealers.

People who are overly sensitive to criticism are generally in untenable positions.

Rev. I. W. Williamson's Letter.

Rev. I. W. Williamson, Huntington, W. Va., writes: "This is to certify that I used Foley's Kidney Remedy for nervous exhaustion and kidney trouble and am free to say that it will do all that you claim for it." Foley's Kidney Remedy has restored health and strength to thousands of weak, run down people. Contains no harmful drugs and is pleasant to take. O. G. Schaefer and Red Cross Drug Co.
